

ERM HealthCheck

Identify and fix the weakest link in your ERM framework

Enterprise Risk Management (ERM) and good corporate governance go hand-in-hand. In fact, company directors and senior managers are under increasing personal obligation and the threat of higher personal penalties to ensure corporate governance and regulatory compliance.

Directors and managers striving to maintain the highest standard of corporate governance and regulatory compliance are increasingly looking to risk management principles to protect their organisation against a wide range of risks, including:

- Strategic risks;
- Financial risks;
- Operational and quality risks;
- Human and physical asset risks;
- Regulatory and reputation risks;
- Business continuity and crisis management risks.

Implementing an enterprise-wide risk management framework can be difficult, especially where a culture change is required. It demands in-depth analysis, long-term planning, a sound and proven framework, effective processes, efficient procedures and (risk management) competent people.

That's why we have developed a structured ERM analysis to assist you evaluate your current position, and to kick-start your ERM strategy.

First we evaluate your ERM framework

Our ERM HealthCheck is a holistic review of your risk management strategy and framework, covering:

- Identifiable risk gaps;
- Risk management systems and procedures;
- Governance and management controls;
- Internal and external compliance; and
- Risk management technology.

We make realistic recommendations

As part of our review, we make realistic recommendations, prioritised in order of importance, for you to consider. We discuss our findings and recommendations to ensure their relevance, significance and implications are understood.
